Given text in original language Harvesting Grass To maximize your farm's potential, focus on harvesting grass effectively. Begin by equipping a mower, usually attached to a tractor. Once cut, consider the following options: Feed animals directly for quick fodder. Sell at designated sales points for immediate cash flow. Convert it into silage through fermentation and storage in silos or bales. Alternative: Process grass further to create hay with its own benefits. Making Hay Create hay by drying out cut grass. Use a hay tedder to flip and spread the grass evenly, allowing it to dry uniformly. When the color lightens, it's ready as hay, which can be fed directly to animals or mixed into total mixed rations (TMR). Sell hay even without livestock if you don't need immediate use. Making Straw Gather leftover stalks from grain harvests to create straw, a by-product with versatile uses. These include: Animal bedding for comfort and productivity. Feed in animal diets, though less nutritionally rich than hay or grass. Direct sales of excess straw. Collecting & Storing Resources To streamline collection, use the following methods: Swather to gather loose materials into swaths. Loader wagon or baler to pick up swaths efficiently. Baling options for round or square bales and storage. Final Tips Maximizing farm productivity not only keeps animals well-fed but also generates extra revenue. Embracing various farming processes offered by Farming Simulator 25 can help create a profitable and sustainable operation. I'm having trouble figuring out what to do at the BioGas Union location and Big Joe's, since I'm using a Nintendo Switch. I have a few questions about selling bales of straw in this game. Specifically, I want to know where exactly within these locations I can sell my straw. Additionally, which buttons on the Switch controller dump the bales? I only have two options: A (activate bale collector) and B (engage/disengage bale collector). Also, I'm hoping to sell any number of bales, even if my collector isn't full. You can sell your straw at the shelter near the animal dealer, look for the groundsymbols cow, sheep, pig, and horse then head a bit south until you see a bale groundsymbol. To dump the bales, drive over the symbol with the arcusin bale collector and unloading will start automatically. You can also sell hay or straw in bales or using the loader wagon. Moreover, it's not necessary to have your collector full to sell your straw, you can do it every time. To master Farming Simulator 22, it's crucial to understand the importance of straws. They can be obtained by navigating to the Heating Plant, located in the southern part of the map, and selling your bales. The baling technology allows you to collect grass, hay, or straw and convert them into balers, which can then be wrapped up. When mowing grass, you'll earn straw or hay, and it's essential to use a loading wagon, baler, or forage harvester to collect the straw. Bales have a high capacity of 4000 liters and come in two shapes: cubic and cylindrical. Players who've played previous Farming Simulator versions know that straws are left behind by harvesters after collecting cereal crops like oats, wheat, or barley. Oats produce the least amount of straw, while barley produces the most. Forage harvesters can collect stray straws with the right header equipment, scoops, and wagons, but using a baler to compress the straw into bales is generally the best solution due to the variety of machinery in the game. Once collected, you have the option to sell the straw or use it for animal bedding. Farming Simulator 22 continues to improve year after year and features well-known companies like John Deere. The ability to modify the game with mods allows players to customize their experience and improve it with features they want. As the community awaits upcoming updates, it's essential to know how to sell bales in FS22 for financial growth and mastery of the game. If you're looking to sell straw in Farming Simulator 22, head to the Heating Plant's southern boundary on your map. Alternatively, visit the farmstead and purchase straws directly from there. Another option is to buy and sell straws at the Dealer section, although note that there is a transit fee involved. To access this option, select the last available spot in the shopping menu and follow it to the Dealer section. You can freely buy and sell straws here. To facilitate straw sales, locate the bale groundsymbol near animal dealers, then drive southward until you see it. Next, drive over the symbol with your bale collector, allowing automatic unloading to begin. Straw may be sold in bales or with a loader wagon.
