Named after an iconic Missoula adventure athlete, the Sam Braxton Trail is a scenic loop with easy-to-moderate terrain. Rattlesnake Wilderness, seen from Stuart Peak | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane Just a few of the recommended hikes extending from the Corridor Trail include Spring Gulch and Curry Gulch. The forest manages three National Recreation Areas on the edges of the town, including the Rattlesnake National Recreation Area. And the challenging Hellgate Canyon Trail, leading up to Mount Sentinel's summit, is also accessible less than a mile down the Kim from town. These in-town spots provide miles of recreation without leaving city limits. This kid-friendly hike starts at a separate parking area, 1.3 miles down the road from the main trailhead. Maybe you're a homeschool parent or you're just looking for a way to supplement what your kids are learning in school. View from Blue Mountain National Recreation Trail | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane On the southern edge of Missoula, Blue Mountain National Recreation Area offers 4,900 acres of multiple-use terrain with over 40 miles of hiking trails. This flat and wide trail follows the Clark Fork River and is the eastern extension of the paved Clark Fork River Trail that navigates through town. However, the "L" trail remains open throughout the year, with users asked to stick to the route. Farther south on the western face, trails like the Mo Z Trail and Pengelly Ridge Trail offer alternatives to reaching the summit. Several singletrack routes parallel the route closer to the creek, offering easy side treks much of the way. There's practically an entire library of maps at your fingertips when you search on Wikimedia Commons.Resource Websites for TeachersThere are a ton of websites that offer free resources for teachers and homeschool parents, and those sites have plenty of printable maps. Throughout the beginning of the route, the trail navigates shoulder-high shrubbery and a dense forest. Two trails extend from the trailhead, North and South O'Brien Creek Trails, which open the option for an approximately six-mile loop. Unsigned and unofficial single-track parallels much of the route next to the riverbank. It's a very popular and almost universally accessible route for all types of hikers. View of Mount Sentinel's southside from Barmeyer | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane The trail forks about halfway up the mountain, offering a loop option for a total three-mile hike. The two most popular include one on Greenough Drive near Greenough Park. Looking the other direction, the Mission Mountains and Flathead Reservation are in view on clear days. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Written by Brad LaneMay 21, 2021 Missoula is a university city in Western Montana that is big on hiking. A giant concrete "M" adorns this approximately 5,158-foot peak on its west face, symbolizing the University of Montana at its base. ) CC0/Free-Photos/Pixabay Maps are a terrific way to learn about geography. This 90-foot double waterfall makes quite the impression throughout the year, with the biggest rush occurring in the spring months. Visitors with good eyes or binoculars can make out the "M" and "L" on the local mountains. Hikers should plan for an all-day adventure when attempting the hike. Extensive trail networks lace each of these outdoor playgrounds, all within a 20-minute drive from downtown. Due to the trails' layout, several different routes are possible to customize the difficulty and distance preferred. Sam Braxton National Recreation Trail | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane On the east side of Missoula, Pattee Canyon is another National Recreation Area within a few minutes' drive from downtown. Downloading digital maps or bringing paper maps can also assist in navigating. Most visitors travel two or three miles on the trail before turning back. Both trails are popular within the local trail running community. It's approximately a 1.5-mile trail from this small parking area to the viewpoint, with 900 feet of elevation gain. A few different trailheads lend access to the North Hills. Hikers encounter elevation on both the North and South O'Brien Creek Trails, with steady but not incredibly steep climbs. The "L" Trail on Mount Jumbo | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane Across the Clark Fork River from Mount Sentinel, Mount Jumbo is another signature mountain of the city. And of the many things to do in Missoula, trekking on a trail qualifies as a must-do experience. And it's a must-visit for weekend trips or extended stays. The trail is a product of conservation efforts by the local Five Valleys Land Trust, which has several other hiking trails planned for the area. Other trails like the four-mile Vista Point Loop offer easier alternatives for a day hike. You'll find color maps and black and white maps. One of the recreation area's crown jewels is the Blue Mountain National Recreation Trail (Trail #3.01). But, generally, the trek is an excellent introduction to hiking in the area. Both trails are a product of a rail-to-trail conversion of the old Milwaukee Railroad line. Otherwise, if you can't share them, you can have them for personal use. The Rattlesnake's central hiking highway is the flat and wide path known as the Rattlesnake Corridor Trail (or Main Corridor Trail.) This retired logging road stretches for over 15 miles, loosely following the contours of Rattlesnake Creek. Maybe you're looking to explore the country and learn about it while you're planning for or dreaming about a trip. And the hike doesn't have to stop at the "M." If stiff leg muscles allow, the trail continues up the mountain until reaching the summit. Note: Some businesses may be temporarily closed due to recent global health and safety issues. Main trailhead at Blue Mountain National Recreation Area | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane Trail #3.01 begins at one of the main parking areas off Blue Mountain Road, accessible with a less-than-a-mile drive off Highway 93. 50States.com is a great place to find printable maps, but it's also a great way to learn more about the country.Wikimedia CommonsIf you're looking for all kinds of maps that you can print and use at home, Wikimedia Commons has an astonishing array of maps of all kinds. Upon reaching the trailhead, it's roughly a 6.5-mile trek to the summit. Users reach the trailhead by traveling approximately four miles on O'Brien Creek Road, accessible from Blue Mountain Road. The route to the trailhead is accessible for low clearance vehicles but expect a slow drive. North Hills/Waterworks Trail, view of Mount Sentinel | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane The North Hills Trail, also known as Waterworks, is an excellent spot for a quick hike any time of day. Even for local athletes who choose to run this length, it's a challenge for the legs. The route is only 0.75-miles long, but the short distance doesn't add up to an easy hike. In fact, you can find plenty of free printable maps of the United States with different options that fit your needs. Several other paths cross the Sam Braxton Trail along the way. It's a short spur trail to the official viewpoint, which features expansive overlooks of the city and the south face of Mount Sentinel. It's a winding, uphill route that makes for a long day as an out-and-back journey. The route to reach the trailhead diverts from the highway near Seely Lake, which offers a scenic landscape to enjoy after the hike. While more manageable than the "M" hike, the switchbacking pathways still induce leg muscle strain. The trail spans approximately 2.7-miles with minimal elevation gain. For those looking to check the "L" off the Missoula must-do hiking list, two trailheads are near one another on the north side of Interstate-90. And there's much more to explore in Pattee Canyon, including the Crazy Canyon Trail and Meadow Loop Trail, on the other side of Pattee Canyon Road. Ascending Lolo Peak | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane The challenging hike to the top of Lolo Peak is a quintessential hike to check off the Missoula bucket list. Hikers should keep an eye out for prominent gray "9.0" tree blazes to stay on track. The trail is named after a notable Missoula conservationist and extends for 2.5 miles along the river. Similarly, Hellgate Canyon Trail, accessible from the Kim Williams Trail on the northern flank, also provides a challenging route to the top. Morrell Falls The increasingly popular hike to Morrell Falls within Lolo National Forest is a 1.5-hour drive from Missoula. The Clark Fork and the slopes of Mount Sentinel sandwich the route the entire way. The entire Missoula Valley comes into focus, including other prominent peaks in the area like Lolo Peak, Mount Jumbo, and Ch-Paa-Qn. Sunsets from this elevated vantage point also tend to leave a lasting impression. Part of the popularity of Morrell Falls comes from its family-friendly approach. For a similarly outstanding hike, north along Highway 83 from Seely Lake, Holland Lake and Holland Lake Falls offer similar landscapes to enjoy. Several hikes in Missoula are accessible from the city without driving a car. If hiking on O'Brien Creek Road, be aware that the route passes through small portions of private property. The route to the "M" begins on the U of M campus, near Washington-Grizzly Stadium. From challenging summit trails to more casual routes along the Clark Fork River, hiking is a defining part of the Missoula lifestyle. This designated wilderness area encompasses over 30,000 acres and beckons for bigger backpacking adventures and challenging day trips. It's approximately an hour's drive to reach the trailhead from Missoula, with the last 10 miles navigating up the rocky and bumpy Edith Peak Road. This large parking area is a staging point for several other routes in the sprawling trail network. Because of this damage, the first four miles are heavily exposed to the sun. Just go to the site and search "printable United States maps," and you'll come across hundreds of printable maps and even ideas for activities to go with the maps you've printed. Routes like the "M" Trail on Mount Sentinel or the North Hills offer easy after-work enjoyment and excellent places to catch the sunset. Some of them offer loads of information, while others are perfect for testing students. Rattlesnake Corridor Trail | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane Of all three National Recreation Areas bordering Missoula, the Rattlesnake is most synonymous with the city. Hiking the North Hills offers an easier uphill challenge than climbing Mount Sentinel or Mount Jumbo but still affords an excellent view of the city and surrounding Missoula Valley. It's essential to stay on the maintained trail while passing through. Missoula is visible 25 miles to the southeast. The view from the "M" rewards the effort nicely. Kim Williams Trail | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane The Kim Williams Trail provides the most accessible escape from the city. The most challenging aspect is often the slippery conditions, especially near the waterfall. The entire trail ascends approximately 1,700 feet for a steady uphill hike, with the most generous climb in the last 0.3 miles. Ch-Paa-Qn, seen from Missoula | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane Ch-Paa-Qn is the tallest mountain in the Ninemile Ranger District of Lolo National Forest, west of Missoula. The large letter "L" on its face represents Loyola Sacred Heart Catholic High School. The site even has several options of maps for every state and some territories. The trail to the Barmeyer Scenic Viewpoint | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane The Barmeyer Trail marks the beginning of a planned trail network on Mount Dean Stone on Missoula's southside. This one-way, approximately eight-mile route climbs over 3,000 feet to reach the summit of Blue Mountain. You can find maps for coloring, as well options you probably never thought of. The nice thing is, you don't have to spend a ton of money on expensive maps. Total elevation gain along the route is less than 500 feet. Kim Williams Nature Area | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane Several side treks along the Kim Williams offer further adventure. One of the best things about Pinterest is that you can pin the ideas that you like best to a board to save for printing later.50States.comThis fun and comprehensive resource website has several options for printable maps. The most common route to reach the Barmeyer Scenic Viewpoint starts from the Barmeyer Trailhead on Pattee Canyon Road. The other is just north of Interstate-90 and the Orange Street exit. You'll also find blank state maps that you can download and print, as well as links to other sites where you can find free maps. And like Sentinel, Jumbo also has a network of routes lacing the elevated landscape. It also serves as a common connector for several other trails in the area. Hiking through the burn area up to Lolo Peak | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane It's nothing but uphill from the trailhead, with the first four miles traversing through a burn area resulting from a 2017 forest fire. Sign on the O'Brien Creek Trail | Photo Copyright: Brad Lane On the North and South trails, excellent views of the Missoula Valley open to the east, including views of Mount Sentinel and Mount Jumbo. On these resource sites, you can find maps that publishers and other teachers have geared specifically for different ages of children. This designated outdoor playground encompasses 3,200 acres of old-growth larch and ponderosa pine landscape. Alternatively, O'Brien Creek Road also extends past the trailhead as a dirt road that hikers can follow for a flat path. The Corridor Trail extends into the Rattlesnake Wilderness, which borders the recreation area to the north. And it's a challenging hike and rock scramble to reach the summit of this iconic mountain. While you're there, you can enjoy the tons of facts and quizzes about the states that you can find on the site. And the flat path is also popular with mountain bikers and trail runners. Mount Sentinel has several other hiking trails worth checking out. Give these sites a try and see if you can find exactly what you're looking for. The cumulative route climbs over 3,000 feet, including a challenging scramble to the actual summit. It's the northernmost Bitterroot Mountain above 9,000 feet and is visible on the southern Missoula horizon from certain parts of the city. It's a popular hike for families, trail runners, dog walkers, and anyone looking to escape into the forest. And as a popular path, navigating the route is very easy. But the big, white "M" has also come to symbolize the city, and hiking up to this emblazoned letter is a quintessential Missoula experience. Up the hillside is the only way to go from either trailhead, with both routes connecting to the Ridge Trail that spans the top. But what makes Missoula a quintessential hiking city is Lolo National Forest surrounding the city's edges. And it's Morrell Falls, itself, that makes the route a common Missoula day trip. You can find blank maps, maps with bright colors, maps that highlight bodies of water - you name it, you can find it here. Over 27 miles of trails wind throughout the area, including the 3.5-mile Sam Braxton National Recreation Trail. Both the Cherry Street and Elm Street trailheads offer routes to the "L" with approximately 0.65-mile routes and 500 feet of elevation gain. This high vantage point is also a spot to watch airplanes coming in for a landing at Missoula International Airport. Pronounced "cha-pock-qwin," and formally known as Squaw Peak, its prominent pyramid shape is a common sight on the city's western horizon. The Corridor Trail is relatively flat until about nine miles in, where the terrain becomes hillier. The trailhead for the summit hike is off Mormon Peak Road, accessible from Highway 12 out of the small town of Lolo. But, the blossoming views of the Missoula Valley make the trek well worth the effort. Counter and clockwise are both enjoyable ways to travel. The trail zig-zags up the exposed face, traversing 11 switchbacks and gaining approximately 620 feet. Snow often caps the summit throughout the year.
