If you've forgotten your Facebook password, there are several ways to reset it depending on your security preferences. To start, go to the Facebook homepage and click "Forgot password?" beneath the password field. Enter either your email address or phone number associated with your account, making sure to remove any extra characters. If you have access to both, you can receive a code to reset your password by selecting the appropriate option and following the prompts. Once you've entered the security code, choose a new password and follow the remaining instructions to save the changes. If you no longer have access to either your email address or phone number, you'll be directed to the Find Your Account page. Enter your phone number, email address, or username to find your account and select "This Is My Account" next to yours. You can then reset your password by following the prompts. Alternatively, if your Google email address is linked to your Facebook profile, you can use it to regain access without needing a confirmation code. Just choose the option to use your Gmail account on the Reset Your Password page and log in. Finally, if you're already logged into Facebook and want to change your password for security reasons, you can do so through the Accounts Center. Click on your profile picture, select Settings and Privacy > Settings, and then click on Accounts Centre > Password and Security. From there, you can enter both your current and new passwords and select Change password. If you have any further questions about Facebook, feel free to check out our forum for more information! If you've forgotten your Facebook password, don't worry - there's a way to reset it even if you can't remember it. First, make sure you have access to either your Facebook email address or the phone number linked to your account. If you're having trouble accessing these, check out our troubleshooting section for help. To start, go to the Facebook login page and tap "Forgot password?" Enter your email or phone number, then tap "Continue." If that doesn't work, tap "Try another way" and select either "Get code" or "Link via email". A code will be sent to your email address or phone number - just enter it in to create a new password. If you're having trouble remembering your passwords, consider investing in a password manager that lets you store all your passwords securely with just one master password. If you forgot your Facebook password or can't access your account, follow these steps: 1. Go to the Facebook login page and click on "Forgot account" if prompted. 2. Enter your phone number or email address associated with your account, then select "Get code via mobile" or "Use my Google account". 3. If you selected "Use my Google account", bypass the code reset process and log in with your Google credentials. 4. Enter a new password and click "Continue". Choose a strong and memorable password that's easy to recall but hard for others to guess. 5. To avoid relying on password managers, write down your passwords on a secure document or use a physical safe. Recovering a Hacked Facebook Account: 1. Visit the Hacked webpage on an old device used to log in previously to try and regain access. 2. If you can't access your email address linked to your Facebook account, contact your email provider for assistance with restoring it. Resetting Your Password on a New Phone Number: 1. Log in to your Account Settings page and update your phone number. 2. Click "Change password" after updating your phone number to create a new password. If you're having trouble accessing your Facebook account, try contacting their support team for further assistance. "Removing my personal details from my account is crucial for maintaining anonymity. Please ensure that no phone number is linked to my profile. Appreciate your help!" (I used SE method, which introduced occasional spelling errors, to rewrite the text)
