It is unlikely that everything works as required by the word "Go". This process provides a good working document for implementation. This task is better practice and is essential to avoid collecting inaccurate data during the transition period. It can be useful to think about the benefits as the value of the modification in terms of this that will be different. It makes sense to do it before implementing monitoring for the measurement plan, since the audit of the GA also defines the advantages and reviewing the data. The benefit plan should provide the tests necessary to support change. These include customized dimensions and metrics, sending data in GA from the back -end of your site using the measurement protocol and expansion of the size. The implementation of the tracking code using a TAG container instead of adding the tracking code directly in the website code means that you will be more agile in the future when changes will be needed. It makes it easy to assign individual tasks to specific people, maintain the shared control lists of all the requested steps and communicate between teams and departments if necessary. We always set a test web property in GA to verify data and make sure that everything is carefully monitoring before sending data Á á ~, Á, Á, á ~ for the existing reporting property. Step 3 - Create an implementation plan now that you know what you want to measure and trace, you need to get all the monitoring in place. When additional tags are needed, or tracking must be changed because your website changes. After considering all the technical aspects and the agreement on tracking solutions for KPIs, it will be time to implement the new advanced tracking. Once you have in place the ability of which monitoring is able, you have updated your monitoring code GA on Google Analytics 4 and decide how you want to implement your tracking code, it will be time to design an implementation plan.
